

Problem Statement

College students need a clear, efficient, and effective method of studying for any given class in which they are enrolled.

Details

Often college students, who perhaps didn't have to study high school, realize that studying is a must and will be essential to do well throughout their college career. However, not many students have an efficient and effective method of studying, and as a result could lead to poor performance. The problem presents itself the moment a student will have to take a quiz, complete an assignment, or a major exam. This could result in having to retake certain classes or their grade point average decreasing significantly. Consequently, it can have a monetary effect on students as well.
